

Build A Website

Contributed by Shawn Vincent

Have you ever thought you'd like to get your products online? Maybe you wish you could be one of those people with their products on their own website making a nice extra income or better yet a healthy living. But then harsh reality reminds you that you aren't a technical guru. You have to be one of those people who sleeps with their laptop and breaths techy talk. Not anymore. Now just about anyone can build a website.

That might have been the way it was a few years back, but things have change dramatically. No longer is it necessary to have a degree in programming for someone to run their own website. In today's world, most anyone can do it. As a matter of fact most activities are as easy as sending email. You just need to be willing to spend the time at it. Just like any business endeavor. If you're willing to do that, then you'll be successful.

Take for example this very article. It used to be that I would have to open some type of special editor and insert my content into code. I know that sends shivers up your spine just thinking about it. But that's the way it was done. Now, I'm typing on a web page in a box that looks and acts a lot like Microsoft Word. When I'm done I'll just click the save button and it will show up on my website. How easy is that?

If you are thinking about exploring getting your products on the web there are lots of resources to help. But you may still be a bit leary and need some convincing. No problem. Here is a site that will tell you what you need to know to build a website. Maybe that sounds a little intimidating for me to say it that way. Don't let it. Remember that I said most of it is like sending an email.

Lots of people are realizing just how easy and fun it can be. Take some time and explore the site above. Who knows, maybe before long we will all be checking out your new site.
